The Challenge – Visibility and Control of Regulatory Stringent Processes

Visibility into the status of processes that are time- and regulatory-critical is a common challenge for many organizations that have technical content development requirements. Whether getting products certified and to market faster to optimize return on invested capital or engineering change requests to address airworthiness directives or simply keeping up with temporary revisions and customer originated changes, visibility and control of mission-critical processes are a lynchpin of organizational efficiency and effectiveness.

While there are a multitude of business process management tools on the market, these generic tools are not designed for component content lifecycle management nor configured for the rigors of aerospace, aviation, marine, military, and other capital-intensive, cash-flow sensitive industries.

The Solution - Insight into Workflow, Bottlenecks, Approvals, and Success Metrics

Tightly integrated with CORENA Knowledge Center and CORENA Studio, CORENA Insight 7 provides maximum efficiency by managing processes and making them visible throughout every step of the change process. It provides the ability to monitor and effectively manage the workflow process, giving OEMs and airline operators visibility throughout the process, from the point of introduction of any change driver (such as a service bulletin, airworthiness directive, or engineering order) through the change request analysis, approval process, re-route, and activity reassignment.

CORENA Insight 7 is easily customizable and built upon BPM2 standards for easy integration with other products such as enterprise resource planning (ERP), maintenance and service lifecycle management (MRO/SLM), customer relationship management (CRM), and product lifecycle management (PLM) platforms in OEM and airline production environments.
